

August 1, 2003

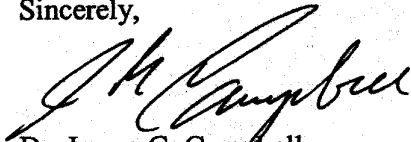

To Whom It May Concern:

I have been an adjunct professor with Honolulu University since 1998. I have tutored and supervised students in the subjects of Economics and business studies, relying on distant learning communications and completion of written assignments. I have supervised the student's preparation and completion of Master's, MBA theses and Ph.D dissertations. I have worked with a dozen students who lived in diverse locations from Sweden, the UK to Hong Kong and several US states.

I have been impressed with the talent and discipline of my students who made useful contributions to their fields of endeavor in thesis work for Master's degrees and dissertations for PhD's.

I believe Honolulu University has provided a valuable opportunity for adult students who don't have ease of access to a post secondary campus to reach educational milestones and to attain higher level degrees.

Sincerely,

Dr. James G. Campbell
Honolulu, Hawaii
honouniv@lava.net