

Kenneth G. Bell, Ph.D.

August 4, 2003

To Whom It May Concern:

I have been connected to Honolulu University since 1987. I began as a student and, after graduating, became a recruiter for the Caribbean region. Later, I became a student advisor.

I found that Honolulu University is very committed to developing the potential of its students by extending high quality studies as it prepares them for the world community.

The University's system allows students easy access to individualized, mentor-guided, studies with much flexibility and adaptability.

The highly motivated students of Honolulu University take an educational journey to achieve their goals, without having to disrupt jobs, family, or community obligations.

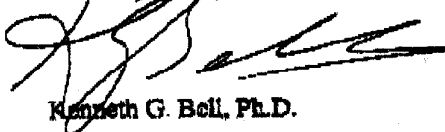

Honolulu University's external degree program increases its students' knowledge and maximizes their earning potential.

The University grants some credits for experiential learning, hence students can achieve their degrees in less time at lower cost.

Many leading educators believe that "Distance Learning" through correspondence studies allows for greater knowledge depth than traditional study systems.

Honolulu University is a good school that is always striving to be better.

Sincerely yours,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'K. G. Bell', written over a horizontal line.

Kenneth G. Bell, Ph.D.